Description:

A stone with a lot of power!
Why do sockets in many facilities are attached in such a decent manner, so that they do not cut a dash? Probably because they are not known for their beauty. Concerning houses, there are many possibilities to easily hide the outlets. And what do you do, when a distributor is needed in the garden? A cable drum would serve the purpose, but it is not quite a beautiful eye catcher in the middle of the garden. The distributor from EUROLITE now offers an elegant solution. It looks like a stone and thus can be placed without attracting attention. Inside there are four safety sockets. The cables can easily be installed via outlet slots on the bottom and by doing so, let the current flow. Simple, but ingenious somehow.
